Yes get paid in cash, merchandise, & prizes for Your Opinions. That's right and it's absolutely true and it happens every single day.

First, I'd like to congratulate you for your purchase; you're in for a big treat! Shortly you will learn why getting paid for your opinions makes perfect sense, and I will teach you how to take advantage of a process that has been around for many decades but not many people are aware of.

Here is some news for you; Corporate America is dying to know what you think about their products.

Why? Because if they make a mistake and offer consumers a product or a service that people don't like, don't want, or won't pay money for, they stand to lose millions of dollars.

So what do they do? They spend money up front to test their products first. They get regular folks like you and me to sit in a room or fill out a survey and ask you questions about their new product or service.

Here is your access to 4 great "Get Paid" programs. Usually these "Get Paid" programs are sold separately and one can pay up to $50 for one of these.

This is an excellent way to earn some extra money on the side, reduce many of your ordinary, everyday expenses and have fun while you're doing it.

So Let's Get Started!

What Is Research Marketing?

To understand why our opinions are such valuable commodities and why companies are willing to pay big bucks to hear what people have to say, it's important to understand a little bit about market research, what it is, and how it works.

Plunging into new product terrain without the proper knowledge and information can be a death sentence for a company or corporation. That is why it is crucial that companies fully evaluate the feasibility of their product and service opportunities by undertaking proactive market research before committing resources to new product or service development.

Market research is a cost-effective way of finding out what people believe, think, want, need or are looking for. This information that cannot be obtained from any other source.

It takes unbiased consumer views to really test the potential profitability of a good product. Industry, commerce and governments use research to help them produce goods, services and policies that accurately and efficiently match up to consumer needs and wants.

Market research is learning all about your prospective market before you try to enter that market. The most important role of market research is to minimize risk by researching a product or service before going live.

All companies realize that it is quicker and cheaper to research a new concept and get that concept right rather than rolling out a product only to find out it doesn't match the needs of buyers.

What Are Focus Groups & How Do They Work?

Focus Groups, Surveys, & Other Market Research Organizations use focus groups to research consumer and public opinion concerning a variety of issues. Corporations look to focus groups for general help in selling their products to the whole world instead of any type of direct marketing efforts.

Focus groups are usually conducted by Market Research companies. Market research companies are hired by the big corporations such as Coca-Cola and Nestle. The reason they do this is because the market research companies have the experience and expertise to make sure the focus groups are accurate and unbiased.

If the corporations did this themselves they may not get impartial information and could make mistakes costing them millions of dollars.

When I refer to companies that conduct focus groups, I am referring to market research companies. These will be the companies whom you will contact, register with, and get paid from. This is VERY important for you to remember.

Generally there are two types of Focus Groups: Offline and Online.

Offline

These are small, roundtable discussion groups on topics ranging from the latest features on video email to anything imaginable. They usually involve about 10 participants plus the group leader or moderator.

Each session usually lasts about 2 hours and the discussion is "focused" on a particular topic for which group members share their opinions. An honorarium of $40-$80 for time and effort is very common. Sometimes corporations will send observers to watch the group in action.

In focus groups, unlike other surveys, people can be shown products or ads and can be given an opportunity to express how they feel and what they think about the product in a normal, conversational setting.

As a research method, the use of focus groups is less about statistics and numbers and more about qualitative matters such as whether people find an ad humorous, and why they find it humorous, or if people believe a product is appealing and why they think so.

Online

Online focus groups are more cost effective than conventional "face-to-face" focus groups. Online focus groups usually invite 8 - 10 people to join for a specific time period (90 minutes to two hours) in a specialized chat room.

This controlled environment allows participants to view text, graphics, sounds/jingles, video or multimedia for evaluation and testing. It's not uncommon for observers from the client corporation to watch the group in action and send private messages to the co-moderators as the group is in progress.

Another type of online focus groups is surveys. Surveys can take anywhere from 1 minute or up to 10 minutes. Once you provide a market research company with your profile, you will be notified about surveys that match your demographic information.

The more sites you sign-up with, the more surveys you can fill out, and the more incentives you can earn. Participation in paid surveys is fun, interesting, and financially rewarding.

Incentives

Market research companies can pay you in different ways. These are called Incentives. Incentives depend on how much time and effort is spent participating in the focus group and/or the kind of market research company (offline or online) that is conducting the research.

The 3 main ways you can get paid are:

- Cash - Usually for face-to-face roundtable groups, although some online companies pay in cash as well.
- Merchandise (depending on the retail value of the product, you may keep the product afterward)
- Prizes - Entries into Sweepstakes/Drawings for filling out quick surveys...do NOT disregard these types of sites. It's a quick way to win lots of cool products and even cash.

How Do I Get Started-What Do I Need:

Participating in focus groups is easy but requires you to be punctual with your schedule, have good organizational skills, proficiency with Internet technologies such as chat rooms, instant messenger, etc. some basic computer equipment and a decent Internet connection

Here are some things that you will need.

Web Form Completion: Download RoboForm (free). It automatically fills in web forms and remembers all of your user names and passwords-with no ads and no spying.

1. Email Addresses: I highly recommend that you open a different email address for your focus group responses. Because you will be filling out LOT's of online forms and getting lots of email in return. Use Yahoo, Yahoo gives you 6MB of free storage in comparison to some others where you only get 2MB or so.
2. Updated Operational System and Browser: Make sure that you have an up to date version of Windows or MAC, and an Internet browser that won't crash if you have to run a Java script. Make sure that you turn off any junk mail filters.
3. Keep Good Records: whether you use Excel spreadsheet or MS word, make sure that you keep tabs on every website that you join-how often they invite you to participate in focus groups and surveys, quality and incentives, and how responsive they are. In time you will find a few really good companies that you like working for.
4. Voice mail and or pager: this is obvious- Make sure that you have either voice mail or check your pager frequently. Sometimes marketers will call you for a face to face meeting with the focus group, so be prepared. These are usually the companies that pay out the most cash, and if they see that you are reliable and flexible and can move on short notices, they will call you more often. Availability is what counts.
5. Decent Internet Connection: if you don't have broadband access, you should at least have a reliable Internet connection to participate in online focus groups. Just make sure that you have a dependable company.

HOW TO JOIN A FOCUS GROUP

Market research companies determine a persons suitability by a screening questionnaire. This is a written series of questions which must be answered in a particular way in order to be invited.

By screening questions companies are provided with a good cross-section of good study participants, because they keep track of things such as age and occupation, and can determine your suitability from such factors.

WHAT KIND OF INFORMATION DO THEY COLLECT FROM YOU?

That depends on the company. Some applications may take only a few minutes to fill out, because the company just wants some basic demographic information. Sometimes research marketing companies will collect and maintain some 250 data points of in-dept information on each panellist.

The type of car you drive, where you work, ailments, media and entertainment preferences, technology savvy and demographics. This information helps them better target projects needs.

They may also ask you for your address, email, and phone number in order to get in touch with you for prizes and cash payouts.

I have provided extensive resource links to market research companies where you can fill out an application and submit your demographics and profile.

The best way is to submit a questionnaire located at these websites for inclusion in the companies database. When they see a match between a person and a focus group of interest they will then contact that person. If the person meets the needs and requirements of the research company, and is able to attend, they will send that person an invitation.

Some marketing research companies will post information about upcoming focus groups on their website, you can then check out groups of interest to contact them through email or phone. Remember never contact a company just to ask "if there's anything that I can join today" and to check your email often.

My advice to you would be to fill out as many applications to online research companies as you can, this drastically increases your chances of getting invited to participate and earn cash and prizes. Some survey companies will send out invitations to their members, who they believe may qualify for the study. The email should contain a link and a survey login code.

Traditionally the first part of the survey will contain screening questions- you must pass the screening process which is determined by the client you can then continue on with the survey and get paid.

For offline research companies, it is better to find some in your geographical area so you can attend the group discussions. Remember these are the companies paying big bucks, and it wouldn't make much sense to register with a company in New York and you live in Mobile Alabama. In addition to the links which I have provided you, check also the yellow pages Market Research companies.

Reputable research companies always try to present you with an incentive which matches the value of time involved. Depending on the retail value of the product they will sometimes give you the product to keep, or there may be a cash or coupon exchange offered.

TIPS ON GETTING JOBS

If you agree to attend a focus group, it is in your best interest to attend. But sometimes under certain situations it is unavoidable, if there is any doubt about attendance, the company will need to know this during the initial interview(this will not necessarily bar you from the group).

Market research companies also appreciate notification of cancellation as soon as possible, and information on a friend or colleague who might be able to fill in.

ONLINE MARKET RESEARCH FIRMS

How to speed up registration

It is crucial to know what research companies are looking for before you begin filling out your application. Here are some suggestions that will help you to receive more invitations and get a better start in participating in research projects.

- Be honest. The people who receive your application are trained to spot misleading or dishonest answers, they will reject your application if they detect any type of dishonesty and you will never know it.
- Answer all questions on the application. Most of the time there will be screening questions included in the application that categorize you into different demographic groups. These questions may include personal information about you such as, race, religion, gender.

Usually you are not disqualified for not answering certain questions however, if you do not answer a particular question and they need this information for a particular research project you may not qualify.

Be sure to complete all sections, because they will be used to screen your qualifications for different research projects. So you should answer all questions. Complete all the demographic sections of the application. Often times there will be a section that will ask you to indicate your hobbies, or the products that you own or plan to buy, be sure to complete all sections. If you say that you plan to buy a cell phone you might qualify for a project that asks you to rate various cell phone promotional offers.

- Most demographic sections allow multiple answers, be sure to indicate all that apply to you but do not overdo it. Don't be tempted to check all items in a section to help improve your chance of being selected, the reviewers are trained to spot applicants who are trying to embellish their application and you will be disqualified. Always be honest and answer only the questions which apply to you.
- Always double check for correctness of your name, mailing address and email address if your email address is wrong a company will not be able to contact you to participate, the mailing address you provide will be used to mail your pay check.

Remember, there are tens of thousands of companies worldwide who are spending tons of money on market research. Today's technology means that they can analyze market research information in incredible detail, so any new data they can get will be incredibly valuable.

Of course, the process starts with gathering the information to be analyzed. Years ago, this was a very expensive and time consuming process.

It involved sending market researchers out onto the street with forms and clipboards, and gathering information from anyone who could be stopped and persuaded to fill in a survey. This was a never an efficient process, and certainly an expensive one. But thanks to the Internet, all that has changed.

Armed with that information, they can then improve or enhance their products to meet this demand, and make huge profits as a result.

For anyone who wants to earn a useful part-time income, this is a fantastic opportunity. You don't need experience, or qualifications...as long as you have access to the Internet, you are qualified to start.

All you need to do is to log onto a site that publishes these online marketing services, and choose the ones you want to fill in.

The amount you get paid per survey varies according to the complexity and value of the information.

But if you choose the right type, you can earn a significant sum without having to work too hard. All you have to do is answer the questions honestly and clearly.

When you have finished the survey, hit submit, and you're done for that job. You can then immediately start another one.

I would suggest contacting as many companies as you can or want to, to earn working from home the type of income that we all need and want.

Below you will find a database of companies that will pay you to pass out free samples, demonstrate products, take customer surveys, collect data, set up merchandise displays, and other work opportunities.

Most of these jobs are part-time and many offer you the freedom to set your own hours.

Getting started is easy. Use the links below to find the companies that interest you. We have provided a link for you to explore each company's website and also a link that goes directly to their signup page (where available.)

You will be asked to fill out an application form for each company. The more companies you sign up with, the better your chances are of finding an opportunity in your area.

Have Fun.....

Here are some surveys sites that you can immediately apply to and start working today!

What to Look For...

Of course, you want to be sure that the companies you are dealing with are reputable companies who will pay you the money you are promised. So it's a good idea to look for companies who have been around for a while, and who provide clear contact details on their web site.

If they are members of major market research organizations, so much the better. You can usually spot which are the genuine organizations by the way their web site is presented, and the more sober presentation of the copy on their home page.

How Much Can You Earn? That really, is up to you. You need to invest some time and effort into finding the right survey organizations to work with, then allocate time to work on the surveys. Remember, that the amount of work available is likely to vary. One week, things may seem a little thin on the ground, the next week you may be snowed under.

When work is available, make sure you do it, you can always take a break when things slow down a little.

The main thing is to get started. Don't expect instant results – you may have to register with a number of organizations before you start getting results. And don't rely only on the contacts we have given you in this report.

Do your own research – after all, it's as easy as Googling search terms such as 'participate in paid surveys.' The results will change from week to week, so it is always worth going back to the search engines once in a while to see what you can find. Filling in surveys for cash can be fun and rewarding, and can make a real difference to your bank balance. So don't delay – resolve to make a start right now!
